We hope you will join in thanking Dick for his many years of service to our university and our state and wishing him an enjoyable retirement.

Protecting the Prevention and Public Health Fund

The Prevention and Public Health Fund in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act was designed to address public health and prevention needs, areas that have been overlooked for many years, resulting in rising rates of chronic disease that have driven the cost of health care higher.

A significant amount of the funding emphasizes implementing successful evidence-based nutrition intervention that have been designed and executed by ADA members. Preventable diseases that are nutrition related, such as heart disease, cancer and diabetes, are responsible for seven of 10 deaths among Americans each year and account for 75 percent of our nation's health spending.

However, the Prevention and Public Health Fund has now been placed in jeopardy in Congress and may be eliminated completely. If this happens, nutrition interventions and other successful prevention efforts will be lost; once again, the focus would be only on chronic disease.

Your action is needed now to ensure this historic effort — to focus on prevention, reduce health expenditures and give consumers knowledge and tools to make positive behavior challenges — is not repealed.
